

ABSTRACT

An inflatable play structure has a wind passage that helps stabilize the structure in high winds. The wind passage can be any suitable size or shape, but preferably has a vertical cross-section area of at least  $0.5 \text{ m}^2$ , and at least  $1 \text{ m}^2$  for each m of structure height. The 5 wind passage is especially useful for inflatable structures having slides.